

Patience, Impatience Or Forbearance?

Mushiba: Patience is a lesson we all must learn because it is part of the Universal Curriculum ~ one of those required courses. Interestingly, many people use the concepts of Patience, Impatience and Forbearance interchangeably. And while Impatience is simply not being patient, Forbearance means to do without, as Waith explains:

Waith: “Forbearance will be understood more as you attune to your Higher Self and make connections with other aspects of The Universal Consciousness. Forbearance is highlighted more now because there are issues of lack of Patience ~ not impatience ~ toward entities who may be struggling.”

“Those who think themselves to be highly attuned and advanced may find themselves with the issue of what they think is impatience ~ or, not patient. They may not recognize that it is a lack of Patience ~ Forbearance ~ and in the arrogance of their own attunement, may say, ‘I have a level of impatience, and therefore, I need not worry because it is simply me not being patient.’”

“It is far more than impatience ~ because it is a lacking that then opens up Self for darkness to enter and spin its little web. The lesson of Patience, and therefore, Forbearance, is ever present in your lives. Thus, be vigilant that if there is a void within Self ~ a lacking of Patience ~ that this void must be filled with the Light.”

I believe it is easy to say, and more acceptable, that we are impatient with someone or something than to recognize and acknowledge that we lack Patience ~ Forbearance ~ because it might be interpreted as not being spiritual. Yikes! Remember: We are all spiritual beings living concrete lives ~ and learning our lessons as we move along our path! And as we journey, Focus on Lightheartedness and the Spreading of Light!
